THE SPEAKERSHIP

the Speakership of the next House of Representatives probably means that some of the administration leaders would like to see the big man from Maine ousted from the position he has eld with so much distinction in the

I such a conspiracy will succeed. In first place, there is no man on the Republican side of the House who can even approach the proud eminence oc-cupied by the autocratic Reed, either in brain power or in intense and forcible personality. No doubt a number of his party colleagues hate and ency the Maine man, but they must realize in the end that he is the only man in their ranks who is capable of mading the difficult and delicate task that confronts the Speaker of the next House

Many remarkable things come out as a result of the conseless grind of the political machine. Some are pathetic, some humorous and some trage. Probably one of the most humorous outcomes of the recent election is found in Senator Quay's warning that members of the Pennsylvania Legislature will be bribed to vote against him in the senatorial contest and his offer of a $10.000 for the discovery and expessure of any such attempts.

and it is Say preparation is con-solied to ask Congress for additional noney to carry out its plans. Congress last spring authorized for nomitors, but the appropriations were as limited that the designing officer believed it would not be practicable to give them more than one turret, all though it was recognized by the expect that such vessels would be interfor that though it was recognized by the experts that such vessels would be inferior to monitors how it service built years ago. When the shipwards however, submitted their bids it was evident that the authorities had greatly overestimated the cost of horiding ships, and that dive could be constructed for the amount Congress granted for four. It was then that the experts concluded that it would be a grave mistake to retrogande in the building of this type of warships, and decided to revise the plans if a was practiceable, and to see my vessels of greater fighting and defended screening. At yesterday's meeting of the bureau chiefs a decision was reached to have the new vessels of not best than join tons, and a coalcarrying capacity of 100 tons, which would give them a satisfactory steaming radius. They will be heavy, larger, and have two turrets, mounting two ten-meh guns each, instead of one turret, with guns of this calibre, as intended.

The contractors will be asked to submit of the buls for building them, and if their proposals are inside the limit of the land of the appropriation the new centracts will be awarded at once. If, however, the yards are unable build the vessels for the money available, secretary bong will ask for an increase to the amount to enable him to award the work.

CHRISTMAS TRADE.

The Christmas trade will be good this year, so the Newport News merchants believe, and nearly all of them have received their faincy and holiday goods. There was a time when it took considerable money to purchase presents for even a small family, not so, however, in these days of invention. The manufacturers have crested things to please the little folk and the big folk as well, that can be bought for a mere song. Some of them are real work of art.
